It is a wide range that is totally dependent on the pharmacist. Most check on the new patient, specific meds, and/or triggers from other suspicion. There may be a few that check every control, but this is not the norm.

Subject: Action Item - PDMP checks

Team,

According to regulations, AL, GA, NC, SC and VA do not have mandatory regulations for pharmacists to check the PDMP state database prior to filling. The discretion is left to the pharmacist in determining whether they should/should not check PDMP based on RX content and patient familiarity. Having said this, what percentage of the time do you feel our pharmacists actually check PDMP before filling CII's? How about before filling CIII – CV's? Can you ask several of your pharmacists in GA and AL to get anecdotal stats for me please by EOB Monday? We need this to appropriately calculate labor needs in these states for this activity.

Thank you,
